“The award winners are proven leaders who demonstrate professional distinction. It is an honor to work with such dedicated stewards of public health and the environment,” said Pei-Chin Low, 2010-2011 CWEA President.

The program seeks to recognize outstanding achievements within the water environment field, improve the professional status of all personnel working in the field, and stimulate public awareness of the importance of wastewater treatment to public health and the water environment.

“This award shows that our achievements in wastewater treatment and watershed protection are an asset not only to Vallejo, but also to the state of California. We are thrilled with the award, and very proud of our dedicated and professional staff who work so hard to protect the public and the environment,” said Ron Matheson, District Manager at Vallejo Sanitation & Flood Control District.

Nominations that advance through CWEA’s 17 local sections’ awards programs are eligible to compete statewide. Award winners were chosen from more than 150 applicants. In 2008 and 2009, Vallejo Sanitation & Flood Control District has placed second in the statewide competition; this is the first time they have won.

Established in 1929, CWEA’s awards program has grown to acknowledge excellence in more than 20 categories honoring exceptional California water environment professionals, collection systems and wastewater treatment plants. Categories include Wastewater Treatment Plant of the Year, Collection System of the Year, Public Education Program of the Year as well as awards of individual professionals in various vocations.
